In Russia, people eat ..... blini ..... for breakfast.

MOSCOW, RUSSIA

Breakfast in Russia is a very important meal because the weather is cold and we need to eat something warm and healthy to start the day. Some people drink coffee for breakfast, but hot tea is more popular. There are lots of different kinds of bread to eat. Brown bread is very traditional in Russia. Blini (pancakes), sausages and fried eggs are also typical things to eat for breakfast. Kasha (porridge) is also very popular, especially for children. We eat it with tvorog (a kind of cottage cheese) and sugar.

ST PETERSBURG, RUSSIA

Shchi is very popular in Russia. It is cabbage soup and you can put anything in it. A lot of Russian proverbs talk about this soup in them. For example, Shchi da kasha pishcha nasha means Shchi and kasha are our food. My mum makes the best shchi in Russia! She puts cabbage (of course), meat, carrots, onions and green pepper. You can eat shchi at any time of the year. It's delicious!
